TIDES

Digital Music Festival for Argyll, March 2021

Showcase Opportunities for Musicians

Guidelines

What is TIDES?

TIDES is an ambitious partnership between Live Argyll, Dunoon Burgh Hall and CHARTS, funded by Creative Scotland. Led by Producer, Iain Maclean of Production House Studios, Glasgow, TIDES aims to meet some of the challenges musicians face as a result of the pandemic and the lockdown halt to live music.

TIDES is an online music festival being designed around a range of genres from the Cowal Peninsula and it will also showcase a range of other performers from Argyll and beyond.

The project aims to highlight a vibrant and wide range of new music which has emerged over recent months to premier online on March 27th, to reach national and international audiences.

Fee

There is no fee attached to this opportunity. Benefits are that we will showcase and promote your work, using the film you give us, which we would aim will build your contacts and audience base. The showcase element to the festival will include having information about you and your music on the festival page.

Due to the nature of this special project partnership with Dunoon Burgh Hall, Live Argyll and CHARTS for March 2021, financial support is only available to musicians living on the Cowal Peninsula.

Who can apply?

Musicians need to:

- Live in Argyll and Bute
- Have a film of music ready to give us or ready by a set time

- Have previous experience of live performing (desirable)

Easy to apply

Please forward your application form and information about your music as an attachment to an email, to us at info@chartsargyllandisles.org

For more information contact Producer, Iain Maclean at iain@quartz-group.com

Deadline

The deadline for applications is 12th March at 5pm.
